Democrats treat the efforts of the Prattless with derision, and insignantly dismiss the suggestion that he may secure the office. It is regarded among representative Democrats as preposterous that, in this solid free sliver community, a rold-bug McKinley Republican should be appointed to pruminent office by a mayor who in national politics is a free sliver Democrat, and confirmed by a council, an overwheiming majority of the members of which were elected on a free sliver Democratic platform.

CHAHRMAN DUNBAR'S VIEWS.

D. C. Dunbar, chairman of the Democratic city committee, gave an interesting expression of views to a Herald representative yesterday. A contemporary that is conducted in the interest of Mr. Pratt has, with great frequency, accused Mr. Dunbar of hostility to its idol, and he pleads guilty to the charge, disavowing, however, any personal feeling, and voicing his opposition simply as a Democratina at axapayer.

"Arthur Pratt should not be appointed chief of police," said he, "for several weighty reasons. I have never doubted that Mr. Clark would appoint him, because I am satisfied that before Mr. Lannau, Mr. Salisbury and other gentlemen connected with the non-partisan movement ever agreed upon Mr. Clark for their candidate for mayor, that in some manner he had assured them that he was Mr. Pratt's friend. "Second—He is a McKinley gold-bug Bepublican, and his an application now on file at Washington for a federal office, and is strongy indoesed as a supporter of the administration; and, while gir. Clark ignored the financial leave in the campings, the majority of the council were elected on the Chicago platform, and Mr. Fratt's appointment therefore would be an effont on them.

"Third—Mr. Devine's appointment as chief of the fire department being certain to come, it is not fair that both of these important departments, with their large patronage, should be given over to the two most astoto schemers in the Republican party; and increfore a Democratical party; and increfore a Democratical party; and increfore a Democratical party; and increfore a fire of police, to carry one the non-partisan idea.

"Pourth—During Mr. Pratt's three years' incombency, he has not held the position the past year, although he has insisted on drawing the sniary, the police department has been characterised by discord, contentions, strife and insubordination to a disgraceful degree; and while the fault may not have been all on his side, stiff it has been shown that with him suspended, the department has been conducted as smoothly and satisfactorily as could be desired.

"Fifth—While there may be some exceptions, the present police force, as a whole, is very satisfactory. They have in many cases passed exercine to the most part, the best material in the sity. Mr. Pratt's friends, in order to secure support for confirmation from members-elect of the city council, have promised enough places on the police force to render necessary the discharge of almost the entire force as at present constituted. BAIT HELD OUT TO THE COUN- Meterological Summary of Salt Lake IN SOME WAY HE FELL UNDER CILMEN-ELECT. THE CARS.

> Accident Occurred at an Early Hour Yesterday Morning-An Investigation By Justice Gailey-Funeral Will Take Place Today.

Kaysville, Jan. 1.-Thomas Digges, an

Kaysville, Jan, L—Thomas Digges, an employee of the Oregon Short Line, met an awful death beneath a moving freight train near the depot here at 2:30 o'clock this morning. Mr. Digges was rear brakeman on a north-bound freight and as the train neared the Kaysville depot he was sent forward over the cars to assist in some switching that was to be done. In some manner he fell beneath the car and was dragged to death.

The first intimation that the crew had of an accident having befailen their comrade was when Conductor. Buck saw the shattered, fragments of the unfortunate fellow's laintent lying beside the track with a faint flame still glimmering on the wick. The train by this time had come to a standstill, and the conductor hurried forward to the station and made inquiries as to whether Digges had reached the ensite. On discovering that he had not been seen the night operator, Alex. Thornton, hurried back along the train, keeping a that plookout for what he expected would be the mangled body of the brakeman.

THE BODY FOUND. of the brakeman.

THE BODY FOUND.

He had gone but a short distance from the station when horrifying groans told him that the poor unfortunate was not dead, but that he was in the throes of mortal agony, and upon in the throes of mortal agony, and upon reaching the place from whence the reaching the place from whence the in the threes of mortal agony, and upon reaching the piace from whence the sounds proceeded he found the victim pinned firmly down between the rails, his body extending lengthwise under the car, his right arm across the rail, and the car wheels fitted closely up under the shoulder. It is believed that a bolt which projects an inch or two through the brake-beam had caught in the back of his coat and thus he had been dragged, face downward, a distance of near 600 feet from where his lantern was found to where the car finally stooped.

his lantern was found to where the car finally stopped.

The train was run backward far enough to release him and he was tenderly lifted from the track, but the constant grinding and crushing of the wheel had done its work, and though it has not passed over him, the injuries were such that death resuited before he could be carried to the station. He uttered no word and it is not certain that he was conscious. Strange to say the body was but slightly disfigured, and this fact has led to the belief that he retained consciousness sufficiently to keep his face from coming in contact with the ground while he was being so cruelly dragged such a great distance.
